JOURNAL OF THE SENATE

Forty-eighth Legislative Assembly

* * * * *

FIFTY-FOURTH DAY

Bismarck, March 22, 1983
The Senate convened at 10:00 a.m., with President Sands presiding.

The prayer was offered by Rev. DeVern Schwenn, First Methodist Church, Bismarck.

Almighty God, Who of Your infinite wisdom have chosen that we should live our lives in this place and at this time, help us to enter into this day's responsibilities with brave and confident hearts. We do not possess the perfect knowledge to fully understand the problems that we face, so give us the grace to draw upon the insights of others, and the faith to receive the wisdom from God. Give us the wisdom to distinguish between our personal desires and providential direction. Since it has been determined that today's rewards will not be handed to us, but they will come because of diligent labor, give us the stamina of determination and perseverance. As we labor over these responsibilities today, our Lord, be our companion and friend.

In the name of Christ, our Lord. Amen.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

SEN. MAIXNER: Mr. President: I rise on a point of personal privilege and request my remarks be printed in the Journal.

Mr. President, members of the Senate: Last Friday night, the Hettinger Black Devils became the new North Dakota Class "B" champions. That victory was the culmination of many years of hard work and sacrifice by players, coaches, parents, and others.

Any Senator in this chamber would be proud of this accomplishment. I personally am particularly impressed by the emphasis that Hettinger places on the academic achievements of their athletes.

In the post-game interview, it was noteworthy that the coach of the Black Devils made reference to the high academic standards his players had set for themselves.

Having the State Champions from District 39 is an honor. Having a team and a coach that is willing to be an example for the state in the areas of academic achievement and sportsmanship is a credit to North Dakota.

POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

SEN. NETHING: Mr. President: I rise on a point of personal privilege and request that my remarks be printed in the Journal.

Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the Senate: I was absent from the Senate yesterday because I was attending a meeting in Washington, D.C., and I would like to give you a summary of the reasons for my absence.

Back in July of 1982, President Reagan appointed me to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations. This is a commission which was established in 1959 and consists of representatives from the United States Senate, United States House, cabinet officials, citizens, three citizen members, four governors, three mayors, three county commissioners, and three legislators. I am one of the three legislative members of that commission.

As an outgrowth of this appointment, I was recently invited to serve on a national advisory panel to the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations study dealing with "The States and Distressed Communities Project," and it was for that reason that I was in Washington yesterday.

This panel consists of four elected officials from the United States: Senator John Kelly from Michigan, who is chairman of the Senate committee on corporations and economic development; Mayor Thomas Moody from Columbus, Ohio; the Honorable Wilson Riles, Jr., who is a city council member from Oakland, California; and myself, representing the elected officials. In addition, this panel consists of three technical experts: Dr. Renee Berger, who is a consultant in Washington, D.C.; Dr. Harold Hovey, who is a consultant in Arlington, Virginia; and Mr. James Solem, the executive director of the Minnesota Housing Authority in St. Paul, Minnesota. Both Dr. Berger and Dr. Hovey are consultants in the area of state and local governments.

The project that we are reviewing is entitled "The States and Distressed Communities." Since 1979, the Advisory Commission on Intergovernmental Relations has been monitoring the activities of the states in providing targeted assistance to distressed communities under a grant from the Department of HUD. This is the final year of this project and we are dealing now in a review of the project in three areas. The first is the issues and trends in state aid to distressed communities. Basically, it's an overview of the issues and trends which state governments are confronted with in their efforts to target aid to distressed communities. An example of targeting aid, and what we have done in North Dakota would be to provide impact aid in the communities where we are having energy development. The basic examination of the project consists of three areas. The first is the political and economic factors at the national level which constrain or enhance the capacity of state governments to provide targeted assistance. The second is a look at the full range of state development programs from housing and capital improvements to development finance and transportation. The third is the issues the states face in targeting state aid to distressed communities.

The second part of the program is the implementing of the program into five policy areas. These consist of housing, economic development, community development, fiscal reform, and enhancing local capabilities.

The third part of the project is developing model state legislation or suggested state legislation for the states to follow should they find the need or the desire to enact legislation which will provide state aid to distressed and targeted communities.

Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen of the Senate, this is the scope of the panel's efforts. We will be meeting again in September to review the status of the study and particularly the proposed samples of suggested state legislation, and there is talk of a one-day meeting after that to grant final approval. I do apologize for missing, at this stage of the session, because it's important that all of us be here all of the time; however, I also feel that when we do have a chance to represent North Dakota in capacities where we have had little opportunity before, I think it is worthwhile, and I hope that the project that we're working on and the input that I have, particularly from that of a rural state, will be beneficial in the future. Thank you.
