THE HOUSE RECONVENED pursuant to recess taken, with Speaker Timm presiding.

SPECIAL ORDER OF BUSINESS

ANNOUNCEMENT

SPEAKER TIMM ANNOUNCED that the House would be on a Special Order of Business.

SPEAKER TIMM APPOINTED Reps. Freier and Gulleston to the Escort Committee and the Honorable Byron L. Dorgan, U.S. Senator, was escorted to the rostrum.

MOTION

REP. BOUCHER MOVED that the remarks of the Honorable Byron L. Dorgan, U.S. Senator, be printed in the Journal, which motion prevailed.

REMARKS OF THE HONORABLE BYRON L. DORGAN, UNITED STATES SENATOR

Mr. Speaker and members of the state House, I just came in and noticed the handbill says Disco Dolly and the Fun Bus are ready to meet you at the Third House party. I'm thinking I'm serving in the wrong place. I noticed a lot of familiar faces here and want to thank you for inviting me to say a few words. As you know, the Senate is not in session this week and I know that you have frenetic activity as you try to reach crossover with a lot of legislation. I can't help but think of the times when I worked here in the Capitol. I was leaning over the railing listening to the debate here in the state House and the debate, actually, in the U.S. Senate is not very different. I remember the debate on the REA bill when someone stood up and said if it weren't for the REA we'd still be watching television by candlelight. In the U.S. Senate someone once stood up and said if Abe Lincoln were alive today, he'd be turning over in his grave.

So we have a lot of pithy debate in both bodies of the legislature, both at the state and the federal level. For those who think that virtually all politicians are windbags in blue suits, I just want to say that I think that those who serve both in this tower in the executive branch and those who serve in legislatures, Republicans and Democrats, while we poke fun at ourselves and others poke fun at the political process, I think my experience has been that they are the hardest working, most honest bunch of men and women that I have had the opportunity to know in my life. It is where we make decisions, where we come together and make public policy decisions.

I would like to note as well that the death of Clarence Martin, a member who served in this state House for so many years, someone I've worked with on some raging, aggressive debates in the 1970s on coal issues, represented, in my judgment, the finest tradition and virtue of public service and I pay honor today to his memory as well.

Most people, I think, wonder when the day is done, when you and I in the state legislature or in the United States Congress go home, have we done much to affect the decisions that people care about when they sit around their supper table and talk about life. Have we done much to decide whether their kids are going to go to good schools? Have we improved the schools? Have we done much to determine whether grandmother or the kids are going to have decent health care? Have we done much to determine whether the son or daughter is going to be able to get trained for a job and then find a decent job? Have we done much to make sure neighborhoods and streets are safe? Have we done much to make sure that the air that we breathe and the water we drink is clean? Have we done much to give people an opportunity to buy a house and realize that important dream? Well, we in many ways deal with all those issues on virtually every day a legislature meets and sometimes what seems to be small decisions turn out to be serious decisions that make an opportunity for profound change in our society.

Seems to me in a state like ours we've faced some very special challenges because we are a small state. Not small geographically, but we're a small state in population. We face challenges because of that, especially in the area of education and we don't, as you know, in the U.S. Congress, deal much with education, except higher education. We do a lot of issues on Pell grants and student loans, but the issue of elementary and secondary education is largely dealt with by local governments, school boards, and the state legislatures. The question of what kind of education system we have is a decision largely in your hands and the hands of all the school boards around our state. Like you, I came from a school that was very small. Most of you probably came from a small North Dakota school. My high school graduating class was nine. And if two people were in the library, which was the size of a coat closet, it was very crowded. But now, things have changed. In Regent, North Dakota, if we put an on ramp and an off ramp from the telecommunications information superhighway through Hettinger County and through Regent, they will be able to access the biggest library in the world instantly, just like that. And so technology is going to change our educational system as well. The president of IBM recently gave a speech. He said something I found really fascinating in terms of technology. He said they are close to research on density storage technology, sufficient so that the Library of Congress which has 14 million volumes of work, the largest volume of recorded knowledge in human history, which in the not too distant future, will be able to put those 14 million volumes of work on a wafer the size of a penny. Think of what that does. To carry around a reference pack of 14 million volumes of work to put into a laptop computer and access a reservoir of information almost unheard of in our schools anywhere in North Dakota.

The other challenge we face in a state like North Dakota is the challenge of jobs. There isn't much we can do that would overcome the benefits of better wheat prices and better cattle prices, although we don't control them. Those who do seem to me to increasingly rig them towards prices. I mean you've got bigger interests that have more influence on prices than the smaller interests do. The grocery manufacturers, the grain millers and the grain trade, and a whole range of interests who prefer lower prices than higher prices and they have much more economic clout regrettably than the tens of thousands of individual family farmers. But with respect to jobs, we can, even as we work in ways on the edges to try to help create circumstances where we get better prices for our products, provide the funding necessary for agricultural coops, which are on the rise in North Dakota, so that agricultural processing through the cooperative movement and through cooperative ownership techniques can produce new jobs and new opportunities, yes even for farmers.

I come from Hettinger County, North Dakota, and I know that there are folks in here who represent that area. Hettinger County used to have 5,000 people 25 years ago, now it has 3,000 people. Slope County is the next county, that's our neighbor county. There's someone here who represents Amidon, North Dakota, and Slope County, by the way, which is a county the size of the state of Rhode Island, and last year it had 11,000 births - seven thousand nine hundred calves, 2,500 pigs, 1,300 lambs, and seven children. A population less than 1,000 people last year had seven children in Slope County. People just aren't getting pregnant when they're on Medicare anymore, probably never did. But the average age in those rural counties is sufficiently high so that we aren't having the circumstances - new babies and growth in population. The question for us in jobs is how do we develop economic opportunity in those areas? In this state we have 11 counties that are growing and 42 counties that are shrinking. Eleven counties are growing and 42 counties in North Dakota are shrinking. The question for us is how do we provide economic opportunity? How do we create an economic circumstance to provide some hope and growth and opportunity for those counties that are seeing a shrinking population.

There are two experiments going on in North Dakota. One in north central North Dakota and one in south central North Dakota called REAP zones - Regional Economic Area Partnerships - which I wrote in 1993. The President has just put $10 million for each zone in his five-year budget. We are trying to figure out, in areas where you have massive out migration of people, are there ways to develop a magnet by which you can create jobs that bring people back into rural areas that are now shrinking like prunes. And that's a test for all of us. It's not just enough to say the state's doing well when 11 counties are growing and 42 counties are shrinking. The question is how do we create economic opportunity all across our state.

Finally, we are having a pretty aggressive fight in this session of Congress about a highway bill which also relates to opportunity. And I'm not uncomfortable for a moment with the fact that we get $1.86 back for every dollar we send in in highway taxes. People talk about donor states and donee states. The fact is, we're a state ten times the size of Massachusetts and we only have 640,000 people. Now, a small state that has a lot of people has a tax base trough. The gas tax that affords them the opportunity, to build a big network of roads and keep them up very well and repair their bridges. The fact is, we've got ten Massachusetts in land mass and only 640,000 people, and the average North Dakotan pays twice as much in gas tax as the average New Yorker does every single year. I'm not uncomfortable at all being a state that gets more back than we pay in. We ought to. Can you imagine Dwight Eisenhower in the 50s talking about building an interstate highway system across this country and then sitting around the White House with Sam Rayburn. They're saying, "Gee, how do we justify to any taxpayer building an interstate highway that goes from Fargo, North Dakota, to Beach, North Dakota? How are we going to justify that to the taxpayers? There aren't enough people who live out there to justify that expense." But of course they didn't come to that conclusion because they decided they were going to build a national system and part of the ability to send fresh fruit one direction and frozen fish the other direction is that you do not drive over narrow two-lane gravel roads in the middle. And that's what a national network in our highway transportation system was about. And so I'm not uncomfortable a bit in this fight over highway funding and we ought not get less than the breach when the big states fight over a formula. When the fighting's all done and the dust is all settled, we want to make sure that we have sufficient money to maintain the roads and bridges in our states, rural states, North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and more, so that our citizens have opportunity and jobs and economic growth and expansion as well and that's what that fight's going to be about.

Finally, two water issues. We face the most incredible challenge in water policy that we've probably ever faced in North Dakota. One is the Devils Lake basin. And we may be in a situation where there isn't anything you or I or anybody else can humanly do to prevent more water from coming into that basin and prevent flooding. We've spent $80 million in federal money mitigating damages, raising roads, extending dikes and doing many other things. If we had an outlet in place tomorrow, and I think we should have an outlet, but if we had one in place tomorrow, it would take a foot to a foot and a half off the lake in one year. That lake has increased over 15 feet in three and a half years. So, if someone says let's build an outlet and we'll solve the problem, it's not going to solve the problem. We should do an outlet, we should do more upper basin storage, and we should do massive amounts of mitigation because we have to help the people in the Devils Lake basin who are facing a crisis. But we should understand, as we prepare to mitigate the damage, that we may not, by ourselves, be able to solve that problem. We can, however, reach out and help the folks in the Devils Lake basin as much as we can humanly help them even as we deal with this crisis.

And Garrison Diversion. It is still important to this state's economic future and its job base. Leadership of the state House and the Senate were in Washington recently for a session, a negotiating session, and other negotiations are proceeding. I hope we can solve this problem to realize finally the promise that was given our state. If you accept the flood that comes and stays, we'll give a benefit. You can take the water behind the flood and move around your state for economic development and opportunity. We got the flood that came and stayed, we had all the costs, we've not yet received all the benefits. We've received $350 million in the last 11 years, and that's fine, but it's not enough. We need Missouri River water to be able to go to eastern North Dakota. We need the other several benefits that are incorporated in that, as well, in order to breathe new life and opportunity into our state's economy. I'm anxious to continue to work with members of this body and others on a bipartisan solution to this issue. We will not, a small state like ours, achieve success if we fight each other. Wasted energy fighting each other on the national needs that represent our state's future opportunities, is not going to be time well spent. We must spend it, it seems to me, fighting for the same goals.

Now, let me as I conclude, just tell you about one piece of legislation I passed last year, just to tell you there's bipartisanship in the U.S. Senate as well. Last year I opened my income tax refund, pitiful little thing as it was, and saw they'd put a little card in it that told how to buy a commemorative Olympic coin. Well, I didn't want to buy a commemorative Olympic coin so I threw the card away. But 70 million people that received income tax refunds got a card like that. I thought to myself, gee, if you can put a card in with an income tax refund, we can do something that probably saves some lives. So, I wrote a piece of legislation that says there are 50,000 people waiting for hearts, livers, kidneys, and other organs who are on the waiting list at this time in our country. Eight of them will die today, every day. Three thousand people a year die because organs don't become available. So I introduced a piece of legislation that says let's put a little card in with all the 70 million income tax refunds this year, not about commemorative Olympic coins, but how to become an organ donor should tragedy strike you or your family. And two weeks ago when the some 70 million income tax refunds started to go out the donor card was included. When I introduced this legislation at a press conference I had, Sen. Thurmond who was 93 years old signed an organ donor card. That's an optimist. But you know what he said? You know what, old Strom said? He said, you know the Carolina accent, "I don't know whether I got anything anybody wants, but after I'm gone they're welcome to it." And I was thinking, you know, you can imagine the doctor going into the room and saying to the patient, this is wonderful news, I know you've been waiting for a heart for some long while, a heart has just come available, it's a 1903 model.

At any rate, we do work in the Senate and the Congress on a range of issues, some of which are partisan from time to time by necessity, some of which are bipartisan. But always it seems to me you and I share the same goals and that is to make decisions that will benefit the people of North Dakota. Every mother hopes that her child might grow up to be president as long as they don't have to get active in politics. But of course, that's not the way it works. Politics is the political system in which we make public decisions and I'm enormously proud of it. I'm proud of every Republican and every Democrat and every Independent in between that says count me in, I'm going to stand up, I'm going to be part of the public debate about our future. Congratulations to all of you for the work you do and as you push to conclusion in this legislative session, I wish you well. Thank you very much.

65-05-07.2. Payment to bureau for certain claims. The employer shall reimburse the bureau for all medical expenses related to a compensable injury to an employee if the expenses are not more than two hundred fifty dollars and shall reimburse the bureau for the first two hundred fifty dollars of medical expenses when the expenses are more than two hundred fifty dollars. If an employee's compensable injury is determined through a civil action to have been sustained through the fault or negligence of a third person, or if a settlement has been entered between the employee and a third person through which the third person agrees to compensate the employee for the injury, the bureau, upon receipt of its subrogation interest, shall credit the account of the employer to the extent of the payment made by the employer to the bureau under this section. Upon the bureau's determination that the claim is compensable, the bureau shall pay the medical expenses associated with the claim and notify the employer of payments to be made by the employer under this section. If the employer does not pay the bureau within ninety days of notice by the bureau, the bureau may impose a penalty on that employer. The penalty may not exceed one hundred twenty-five percent of the payment owed by the employer. The bureau shall collect the penalty in a civil action against the employer and deposit the money in the fund. An employer may not directly or indirectly charge an injured employee for any payment the employer makes on a claim. When the cost of an injured employee's medical treatment exceeds two hundred fifty dollars, the bureau shall pay all further medical expenses pursuant to this title. This section is effective for all compensable injuries that occur after July 31, 1995. Compensable injuries paid under sections 3, 4, 5, 6, and 7 of this Act are not subject to this section.

SECTION 2. AMENDMENT. Section 65-06.2-01 of the North Dakota Century Code is amended and reenacted as follows:

65-06.2-01. Inmate defined. For the purposes of ~~this chapter~~ sections 65-06.2-02 and 65-06.2-03, an inmate is a person who is confined against the inmate's will in a city or county penal institution or is a person who, as a criminal defendant before a court, is ordered or elects to perform public service for a city or county in conjunction with or in lieu of a jail sentence. The term inmate does not include an individual injured while incarcerated in the North Dakota state penitentiary or any of its affiliated facilities or an individual injured in a fight, riot, recreational activity, or other incident not directly related to the inmate's work assignment.

SECTION 3. A new section to chapter 65-06.2 of the North Dakota Century Code is created and enacted as follows:

Workers' compensation coverage for inmates engaged in work programs through roughrider industries. The director of the department of corrections and rehabilitation may elect to provide and request from the bureau a program of modified workers' compensation coverage established under this chapter and according to administrative rules and fee schedules of this chapter. Roughrider industries shall qualify for the bureau's risk management program before the bureau may provide the modified workers' compensation coverage. The modified workers' compensation coverage would be for inmates incarcerated at the penitentiary and engaged in work in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries, whether the program is operated by roughrider industries or by contract with another entity or private employer. An inmate who sustains a compensable injury arising out of and in the course of work in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries may only receive workers' compensation benefits under the modified workers' compensation coverage established for that purpose.

SECTION 4. A new section to chapter 65-06.2 of the North Dakota Century Code is created and enacted as follows:

Modified coverage of inmates engaged in work programs through roughrider industries - Conditions. Except as otherwise provided in this chapter, all claims for workers' compensation benefits under this section and sections 3, 5, and 7 of this Act are subject to title 65. A claim under this section and sections 3, 5, and 7 of this Act must be filed according to section 65-05-01. While an inmate is incarcerated at the penitentiary, the penitentiary shall pay the reasonable medical expenses of that inmate at penitentiary medical payment levels, if that inmate incurs a compensable injury while working in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries. If an inmate sustains a compensable injury while working in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries, disability, vocational rehabilitation, and permanent partial impairment benefits may not accrue or be paid while the inmate is incarcerated and may only accrue and be paid after the inmate is discharged from the penitentiary. An injury resulting from a fight, riot, recreational activity, or other activity or incident other than the inmate's actual performance of work duties in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries is not compensable under this title.

SECTION 5. A new section to chapter 65-06.2 of the North Dakota Century Code is created and enacted as follows:

Rulemaking - Excess or reinsurance coverage. The bureau, in cooperation with the department of corrections and rehabilitation and the risk management division of the office of management and budget, shall adopt administrative rules and fee schedules for a program of modified workers' compensation coverage established and provided under this section and sections 3, 4, and 7 of this Act. The administrative rules and fee schedules must provide for the classification of inmates engaged in work in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries, the computation of premium, the payment of claims charges against the classification, the payment of medical bills, excess coverage or reinsurance, and the reimbursement by roughrider industries to the bureau for all claim benefit costs charged against that classification, as well as any allocated loss adjustment expense and all administrative expenses, including the expense of issuing the coverage, for the life of the claim in excess of premiums and medical expenses paid by roughrider industries. Roughrider industries shall secure excess coverage or shall reinsure all excess risks through the risk management division to cover the costs in excess of premiums and medical expenses paid. The risk management division shall assess a premium against roughrider industries for the cost of excess or reinsurance coverage and roughrider industries shall pay that premium.

SECTION 6. A new section to chapter 65-06.2 of the North Dakota Century Code is created and enacted as follows:

State reimbursement for liability in excess of collected premiums. Whenever total costs and expenses charged to the classification of the modified workers' compensation program established under this chapter exceeds the amount of premiums paid into the fund and any policy limits of the reinsurance or excess coverage purchased under section 5 of this Act, those excess costs and expenses are a general obligation of the state and the state shall reimburse the bureau for credit to the workers' compensation fund through legislative appropriation. Roughrider industries shall secure a means of reinsuring excess costs and expenses to minimize exposure of loss to the state general fund.

SECTION 7. A new section to chapter 65-06.2 of the North Dakota Century Code is created and enacted as follows:

No liability for damages - Inmates are not employees. The state and its employees, and the department of corrections and rehabilitation and its divisions, departments, and employees may not be held liable for damages at common law or by statute if an inmate covered under a program of modified workers' compensation coverage under this chapter sustains a compensable injury while working in a prison industries work program through roughrider industries. An inmate covered under a program of modified workers' compensation coverage under this chapter is not an employee of the state or the department of corrections and rehabilitation and its divisions and departments except for the purpose of modified workers' compensation coverage under this chapter.

SECTION 8. EXPIRATION DATE. This Act is effective through June 30, 1999, and after that date is ineffective."
