COMPONENTS OF A STATE COMPENSATION PHILOSOPHY STATEMENT

This memorandum provides information on possible components to include in a state compensation philosophy statement.

The Hay Group has provided the following definition of a compensation philosophy statement: A compensation philosophy statement is intended to provide a foundation for the design and administration of compensation plans. It defines what you pay for and why. A compensation philosophy should be written in general terms in order to provide a lasting basis for future compensation design and administration decisions.

Human Resource Management Services has summarized the state's classified employee compensation philosophy as follows:

The compensation philosophy applied to the North Dakota classified service can best be described as a combination market and internal equity system. Internal equity in assigning pay grades is based on a job's knowledge and skills, complexity, and accountability. Each of those job factors carries a range of defined point values. Jobs similar in total point values are slotted into the same pay grade.

If the committee chooses to recommend a compensation philosophy statement, it may consider developing the statement during the remainder of its study by:

- 1. Reviewing other states' compensation philosophy statements.
- 2. Identifying the key components and provisions to include in the philosophy statement.
- 3. Incorporating recommendations from the Hay Group resulting from its study of the classified employee compensation system.

- 4. Receiving input from the executive branch, employees, employee groups, and others.
- 5. Finalizing the provisions to include in the philosophy statement.

Key components of state compensation philosophy statements may include:

- 1. Summary:
- 2. Categories of employees for which the philosophy statement may applies;
- Definition of terms:
- 4. Goals of the compensation system;
- 5. Compensation ideology;
- 6. Compensation methodology:
- 7. Designation of responsibilities; and
- 8. Legislative intent.

Some philosophy statements are general and broad while others are more detailed and specific. Most often compensation philosophy statements identify the goal of the compensation system is to attract, retain, and motivate employees. The statement may express values of the organization to be used as a basis in attaining these goals. The compensation philosophy statement is typically broad enough to encompass all three components of compensation--base pay, incentives, and benefits. Compensation philosophy statements may include components to send a message about the state's expectations of employee performance and related rewards; express legislative intent; or detail specific procedures, policies, or regulations of the compensation system.

A summary of other states' major compensation philosophy statement components is provided in the following chart:

The compensation program will be based on consistent principles of fairness throughout the state, yet will be flexible to meet changing needs. This will allow for multiple pay plans to fit different needs and market variables for the different branches of government and within those branches.  Establishing the value of compensation will be primarily based on establishing the appropriate market value of the job. For positions for which a market value cannot be readily identified, the value of compensation for those positions will be based on a fair, defensible, and understandable method.  While recognizing that service and tenure yields valued experience, pay delivery mechanisms will be based on a combination of achievement of performance objectives, recognition of differences in job content, acquisition and application of further skill, and education and pay for the achievement of team/unit or department goals. The cost-of-living adjustment.  The performance bonus.  These components shall be awarded based on annual performance appraisals of all employees.  The State Personnel Commission is charged with the responsibility to adopt policy and regulations for performance appraisals. The state statute contains specific details of the performance appraisal policies and regulations.	Proposed initial assignments of pay bands and pay band adjustments may be adopted by the administrator of the Office of Personnel Management after a public hearing. Such actions shall be reported to the Governor, President Pro Tempore of the Senate, and Speaker of the House of Representatives. The report shall include the justification and financial impact of the action.	Establishing the value of compensation shall be based both on principles of internal equity as measured by a defensible method of job evaluation and external value as measured by competitive compensation in the relevant market.  All aspects of compensation (base salary, benefits, allowances, and incentives) shall be considered as a total compensation package for state employees. The state's pay programs shall allow both fixed and variable compensation as well as non-cash reward and recognition programs.  Total compensation shall be targeted at a competitive level when compared to the appropriate labor markets to allow the state to attract and retain the quality and quantity of employees needed to fulfill its service commitments to its citizens.  Pay delivery mechanisms shall be based on a combination of establishing and maintaining relativity to market; achievement of performance objectives; recognition of differences in job content; and the acquisition and application of further knowledge, skills, and abilities.

The Legislature is responsible for the adoption of the state's compensation philosophy and the provision of funding for the compensation program.
Legislative intent		Regardless of specific budgetary conditions from year to year, it is vital to fund necessary compensation adjustments each year to maintain market competitiveness in the compensation system. In order to provide this funding commitment in difficult fiscal conditions, it may be necessary to increase revenues, to prioritize and eliminate certain functions or programs in state government, to reduce the overall number of state employees in a given year, or any combination of such methods.	Longevity bonus payments shall not be considered as part of base pay.
