Hi my name is Hilary Lund and I am testifying in opposition to bill HB169. Parents should have the freedom to claim vaccination exemptions no questions asked. It's the parent's right to make medical decisions for their children. These exemptions are personal and private and are solely up to the parent, not the health department. The government has no business deciding what is best for a child especially when they know nothing about said child and they're medical history. Parents have undoubtedly done their research and have a reason for their exemption. No child should be denied an education because they have an exemption. Again that is personal and private and is up to the parent.
