When King George promulgated the "Intolerable Acts," the colonial legislatures played a leading role in organizing the rebellion against the budding tyranny, which eventually led to the creation of our democratic republic. Two and a half centuries later, we have now endured 19 months of unabated tyranny that makes King George look quite tolerable, yet the representatives closest to the people have been stone silent in most cases.

On March 26, 2020, when it was already apparent to those with a modicum of foresight that something much darker than "15 days to flatten the curve" was afoot, I called upon the state legislatures to convene immediately to investigate the virus, how to deal with it properly, and to redirect policies away from the unelected federal and state departments of health. Not only did they fail to convene at the time, but even during the 2021 regular session, most states failed to enact any meaningful limitations on COVID tyranny and redirect the profligate
