REMARKS OF FORMER SECRETARY OF THE SENATE WILLIAM R. HORTON

While reflecting on the life of a friend who recently died, and on life in general and its few years, I've found it to be an endless road of bittersweet trials of contradictions, aspirations and expectations. It's as if we were born within a dream, a dream of hope and expectations of those who brought us into this world, and for better or worse, the reality of which somehow went beyond those hopes and dreams. And so, shall we also fade away within a dream. "As a flower, as a fire, as a hushed footfall in a long forgotten snow." In the first dream the accumulation of material things was to be so self-centered and arrogant. How is it now in the ebbing tide of life we see so clearly, for in that final dream we see the futility of what a fruitless endeavor it was not to get past ourselves, thinking we would somehow always be on some endless ride. It matters not who we are or what our beliefs may be, in that final dream the things of value will be, "that touch, that smile." For what greater possessions are there than "to forgive and be forgiven." Everything else is not only trivial, but meaningless. (Quotes from "Let it be Forgotten" by Sara Teasdale.)
