

As you consider Yellowstone National Park's wild herds and their future in the Park, I feel strongly that the longhorn cattle and wild horses should remain in the Park. Without question, the Park was dedicated by then-President Teddy Roosevelt as a revered space to allow these herds to roam unencumbered for perpetuity as part of our national heritage.

I follow two photographers who document the wild horses, their lineage, their families, their births and deaths as magnificent wild animals in the Park. I continue to be inspired and amazed at the strength of their familial bonds. I believe that removing either herd would negatively impact the local State economy and tourism to the area. I've never been to the Park, and may never as I'm now 75, but I continue to take immense pleasure in the photographers' work to document these wild horses' lives. As part of our heritage, I'd be saddened greatly if you chose to remove them from the Park. Please do whatever you're able to keep these wild herds in Yellowstone National Park.

Thank you for your consideration.
