

I am writing today in support of SCR4006 which calls for federal protection of the iconic wild horses of Theodore Roosevelt National Park. Without this protection these horses can fall prey to inhumane removals at any time. Such removals not only hurt the horses being taken away from their families and the only home they've known, but these removals also hurt the residents of North Dakota and people across the country who care deeply for this historical herd and believe they are worthy of protection. North Dakota is lucky to have this herd as part of the national park. They are a popular attraction among visitors. Any removal could impact business and the flow of money into the area from tourism. I hope to see them one day. Please pass this legislation.
