COMMUNICATION FROM GOVERNOR EDWARD T. SCHAFER

April 5, 1999

Attached please find Senate Bill 2425, which I am returning to the Senate and hereby veto.

This legislation attempts to supplant financing available in the private sector through government bonding. It does so in an unfocused fashion that, in any event, appears unworkable.

Based on consultations with bond counsel, it appears the proposed bonds are neither saleable nor tax-exempt. First, they will not find buyers since the full faith and credit of North Dakota is not behind them. These are solely revenue bonds. Investors will be looking for collateral and standing similar as a commercial bank, yet facing additional administrative costs involved with the government bonding.

Second, the bonds will be used to finance private activity and are therefore not tax exempt. Such an exemption is usually a major attraction for investors.

Given these circumstances, any financial problems facing the venture would compel the Industrial Commission to repurchase the bonds. The repurchasing option is an unwise provision in this legislation that would further increase the state's exposure.

In many respects, this bill is reminiscent of the legislation that established the Real Estate Trust Fund in the 1980s. You will recall that the Bank of North Dakota had to write off nearly $24 million last session stemming from that fund.

It is not ordinarily the practice nor purpose of the Bank of North Dakota to be primary financiers of any non-public venture. The state can and does provide financial assistance, but only with participation of the private sector. No such private involvement is included in this legislation.

The primary problem facing agriculture today is profitability. This legislation does nothing in a significant manner to address profitability, and instead offers false hopes to farmers and ranchers through an agent of the government.

I have, therefore, vetoed the bill and respectfully return the same to the Senate Chambers.
