Chairman DeKrey: We will open the hearing on SB 2069.

Karen Larson, Department of Human Services: Support (see attached testimony of Joanne Hoesel, who did not appear).

Chairman DeKrey: Thank you.

Rep. Delmore: We had a total of 33 cases is what we're saying.

Ms. Larson: So far this biennium.

Rep. Delmore: Do you put that notice requirement in administrative rules because I don't see it anywhere in the bill.

Ms. Larson: What we have done to date is to have a policy and procedure manual, it is not in administrative rules.

Rep. Kretschmar: In the new language on the very last line, you request judicial determination, and in the language that was taken out it says by the juvenile court. Is it presumed that the determination is being in the juvenile court.

Ms. Larson: Our legal services and legal advisory unit suggested that that was the case.

Chairman DeKrey: Thank you. Further testimony in support? Any opposition? We will close the hearing. What are the committee's wishes in regard to SB 2069.

Rep. Eckre: I move a Do Pass.

TESTIMONY

SB 2069 - DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES

SENATE JUDICIARY

JOHN TRAYNOR, CHAIRMAN

Chairman Traynor, and members of the Judiciary committee, my name is JoAnne Hoesel and I serve as the administrator for children's mental health programs for the Department of Human Services. I am here to provide testimony in support of Senate Bill 2069, relating to treatment services for children with serious emotional disturbances.

The Voluntary Treatment Program is designed to provide parents the option of seeking out-of-home treatment services for children who have emotional or behavioral issues without having to relinquish custody to a custodial agency such as county social services, solely for payment purposes. Currently, the law requires that both parents agree to the child's voluntary out-of-home treatment. If there is a parental disagreement, there must be a judicial determination by the juvenile court that treatment is in the best interest of the child. Under the current law, the Department makes reasonable efforts to contact an absent parent in order to obtain consent for voluntary treatment. In situations where an absent parent has never been involved with the child but continues to have legal rights to the child, if an absent parent's location is unknown or they are legally restricted from contact with their child, voluntary treatment for the child may be delayed.

The Department supports the proposed amendment to the law, as it seeks to simplify the process for a parent with physical custody of a child to access treatment services. This bill does not intend to limit the authority of involved parents who do not have physical custody as the law would continue to provide them the option of a judicial determination, should they disagree with the child's treatment. Further, the Department of Human Services will implement a policy that requires it send notice of the involvement with this program to the parent without physical custody, when location is known.

TESTIMONY
SB 2069 - DEPARTMENT OF HUMAN SERVICES
HOUSE JUDICIARY
DUANE DEKREY, CHAIRMAN
MARCH 4, 2003

Chairman Dekrey, and members of the Judiciary committee, my name is JoAnne Hoesel and I serve as the administrator for children's mental health programs for the Department of Human Services. I am here to provide information and support of Senate Bill 2069, relating to treatment services for children with serious emotional disturbances.

The Voluntary Treatment Program is designed to provide parents the option to seek out-of-home treatment services for children who have emotional or behavioral issues without giving custody to an agency solely for payment purposes.

This program began in 1995 when Senate Bill 2044 directed the Department of Human Services to establish a program in up to three regions. In 1997, House Bill 1036 made adjustments to the law including an appropriation, limiting the program to children covered by Medicaid and the program was established in all eight human service regions. In 2001, House Bill 1385 made further adjustments to eliminate the involvement of the court unless there was a parental disagreement and added that both parents must consent to voluntary treatment.

Under the current law, the Department makes reasonable efforts to contact an absent parent in order to obtain consent for voluntary treatment. In situations where an absent parent has never had involvement with the child but continues to have legal rights to the child, if an absent parent's location is unknown or the court restricts them from contact with their child, the child's treatment is delayed.

In the current biennium, we have had the following parental situations:

- 11 children were involved prior to the law change and one parent's consent was obtained.
- 13 children had both parent's consent.
- 4 had situations where the court prohibited a parent's contact with the child and no consent was obtained.
- 2 did not respond to a certified letter.
- 2 could not be found after Internet searches and their location is unknown.
- 1 identity of the parent is unknown.

In twenty-seven percent (27%) of the situations an absent parent's consent could not be obtained.

The Department supports the proposed amendment to the law, as it seeks to simplify the process for a parent with physical custody of a child to access treatment services. This bill does not intend to limit the options of involved parents who do not have physical custody as the law would continue to provide them the option of a judicial determination, should they disagree with the child's treatment. Further, the Department of Human Services will implement a policy that requires it send notice of the involvement with this program to the parent without physical custody, when location is known.
