33 SECTION 7. AMENDMENT. Joint Rule 203 is amended as follows:

1 203. Limitation on messaging of measures - Crossover days.

- 2 1. A bill that has passed one house may not be sent to the other house for 3 concurrency after the ~~thirty-fourth~~ thirty-ninth legislative day, except a bill approved
4 for introduction after the deadline for introduction of bills.
- 5 2. A resolution that has passed one house may not be sent to the other house for 6 concurrency after the ~~fortieth~~ forty-fifth legislative day, except a resolution
7 approved for introduction after the deadline for introduction of that type of 8 resolution.

NOTE: This rules amendment was prepared in response to a request at the June 23 and September 14, 2009, Legislative Procedure and Arrangements Committee meetings to present 2011 legislative deadlines to allow the committee to review those deadlines and how rules may be revised to allow additional time for consideration of measures, especially the Appropriations Committees.

The proposed amendments:

- Extend the deadline for rereferral to the Appropriations Committee in the house of origin from the 23rd to the 25th legislative day. This would give the two-day and the three-day committees an additional day for consideration of measures before rereferral.
- Extend the deadline for reporting measures in the house of origin (as well as the final resolution introduction deadline) from the 31st to the 36th legislative day. This would give the three-day committees three additional days, the two-day committees two additional days, and the Appropriations Committees five additional days for consideration of measures before reporting measures out of committee.
- Extend the deadline for crossover from the 34th legislative day (Friday) to the 39th legislative day (Friday). The crossover recess would continue to be on Monday-Tuesday.
- Extend the deadline for reporting constitutional amendment and study resolutions from the 37th to the 42nd legislative day. This would give the three-day and the two-day committees three additional days for consideration of these resolutions.
- Extend the deadline for crossover of resolutions from the 40th to the 45th legislative day.
- Extend the deadline for rereferral to the Appropriations Committee in the second house from the 47th to the 57th legislative day. This would give the three-day and the two-day committees an extra week for consideration of measures before rereferral.
- Extend the deadline for reporting measures in the second house from the 55th to the 65th legislative day. This would give the three-day committees five additional days, the two-day committees two additional days, and the Appropriations Committees five additional days for consideration of measures before reporting measures out of committee.

Attached is a 2011 calendar depiction of current legislative deadlines, with arrows depicting the effect of moving the two rereferral deadlines and the final reporting deadline.
